

007. Thinking, Fast and Slow

by Daniel Kahneman

5 Core Concepts — Quote-Style Paraphrases

1. "Human thinking operates through a fast, intuitive mode and a slower, more deliberate mode of reasoning."
2. "Intuition can be useful, but it can also produce confident judgments from incomplete or misleading information."
3. "People are influenced by cognitive biases such as anchoring, availability, loss aversion, and overconfidence."
4. "When decisions matter, slowing down and deliberately checking assumptions can reduce avoidable errors."
5. "Good judgment requires understanding not only the evidence, but also the predictable ways the mind can distort it."
